DEATH OF A FRENCH CELEBRITY .- The Athenœum, in its Paris correspondence, calls attention to the death of Coulon, a surgeon who was well known in Paris in the time of Louis the Eighteenth. He possessed extraordinary powers of imitation. Coulon gave imitations of the princes and princesses of the Royal family; but he was a good courtier. He mimicked the elder Rev. Richard H. Barhan,) from the tenth English | branch with reservations; but on meeting a prince or princess of the younger, he kept back nothing, but gave his tale it full play. He was particularly successful with the A Ladder to Learning, for Little Climbers, by Duke of Orleans, Louis Philippe, who, on meeting him one day in the Tuileries, said -"Monsieur Coulon, you imitate me wonderfully. I was enabled to judge for my self yesterday.
